Yeah this is what people are upset about. They just created a copyright washing machine. This is a really, really bad thing.

This converts an image into a description (image embeddings) and then generates a new image from it. Only the idea is carried over not the expression (which is the only thing copyright protects : expression).

Yeah that's a copyright washing machine. You can't see how artists wouldn't want their images swiped like this?

Copyright is a bad thing in general. You don't care though, because you're able to use it for your benefit.

Copyright is the only line of defense individual creatives have against mega corporations like Disney from stealing our shit. I don't really understand your argument.
