

So a "fun" story: I used to license my art to a small company that manufactures diamond art kits

A few months ago this company contacted me & said they were struggling & couldn't pay my royalties anymore. I just checked their new website - their shop is now full of A/I images 😊

This company still owes me money as well (not much, but still) since they never paid my last batch of royalties before terminating our contract.

And now I know why they were so eager to end our business relationship - they even asked if they could continue to use my art for free
